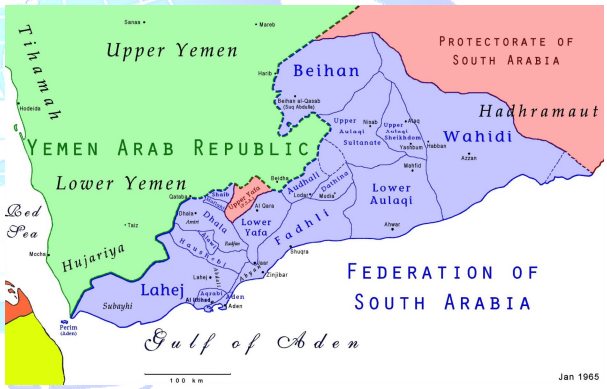
Southern Observatory for Human Rights (SOHR)
Annual report for the year 2013

South Yemen is under penalty of undeclared emergency law

Southern Observatory for Human Rights releases its fourth annual report. The annual report of the year 2013 includes a collection of crimes and violations committed by the Yemen regime forces, during the observed period, against the citizens of the Southern Yemen who are deprived of their basic rights and freedoms. As the number of violation cases exceeded 100, the observatory will include some of them in its report as examples uncovering those shameful acts. The report is annexed with a list including all those killed, wounded and detained, detailing their names, the time and the place in which they were offended with pictures of some of them and video clips for their cases.

Introduction:

The year 2013 passed after it was overloaded with serious violations of human rights in the South of Yemen. Those violations were described as cruel whether they were related to extrajudicial killing or to excessive use of violence when oppressing peaceful protests and activities. Moreover, harsh abuse was applied on the activists of the peaceful movement, including arbitrary arrests. In addition, several intellectuals, writers and journalists were threatened with physical liquidations.



Anxiously, the Yemen authority forces are practicing terrorizing methods on citizens. They have been working on militarizing the cities and deploying military checkpoints on their roads and entrances, besides the random shooting by patrol soldiers on residential quarters. In addition, many cities and villages were targeted and bombed with heavy weapons, disregarding the civilians' lives and their living conditions. All of those violations led to panic and terror among citizens and caused real threat on their lives, security and stability. This terrifying military condition from which Southern provinces suffer is evidence that the Southern Yemen is experiencing undeclared emergency condition, where law is absent and human basic rights and freedoms are violated.

All those facts evoked the Southern Observatory to adopt the task of observing and documenting all those violations to serve as a permanent witness on what is perpetrated by the Yemen authority forces and to let the international community knows how dangerous those violations are on the lives of Southerners. On our turn, we call the international community to hold its humanitarian responsibility and to work on protecting southerners and reassuring them.

The outcomes of the violations of human rights in 2013:

Southern Observatory was able, during 2013, to observe and document 228 extrajudicial cases, 404 attempted murders, causing different injuries to the victims, and 226 arbitrary arrests. The Southern Observatory notes that those violations will always serve as a witness on the crimes perpetrated by the Yemen authority forces against the citizens of South, and they will always considered as a shameful stain on the forehead of those forces until criminals are justly punished.

In this context, Southern Observatory took over the task of addressing the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and other humanitarian organizations and freedom and democratic forces, reporting them with notifications and statements that would timely uncover the violations committed against civilian victims.[1]

Violations mounting to genocides:

The Southern Observatory points out that the ugliest transfiguration of those violation images represented in violent incidents that are considered as thoroughly crimes against humanity, as the Yemen government forces targeted human gatherings in the aim of killing them just for being opponent to their policies and eager to regain freedom and independence. That is what happened on Thursday 21st of February when civilian Southerners were celebrating the anniversary of "Dignity Day". The Yemen authority forces confronted them with shooting, leading to the killing of sixteen and wounding of fifty three. Moreover, those forces confronted militarily the "Peaceful Revolutionary Rise", adopted by Hadramout Tribe Alliance on 20 December 2013 and prevailed in all Southern provinces, which resulted in forty three dead and one hundred and thirteen wounded until 30 December 2013. Concerning the massacre of Sanah in Dali, cruelty there was beyond imagination, as the Yemeni artilleries bombed people's gathering in the southern city of Dali, resulting in twenty three killed and forty five wounded.

[1] The Observatory sent this year ten statements and several notifications

The Southern Observatory believes that those violations have overcome the description of being "gross" and they mount to be crimes against humanity, not to say genocides. Therefore, the Observatory considers that the Yemeni government should take the procedures that would prevent the perpetrators from escaping punishment. No matter how long the period of escaping punishment will be, it is not recognized by the law since the crimes are non-obsolescence according to the provisions of international law.[2]

Shelling cities and villages as state terrorism:

Shelling southern cities and villages was continuous during this year; it was even intensified leaving tens of killed and wounded and destroying a lot of houses and facilities. Thus, many cities and villages, particularly Dali and Habilain, were a permanent target for those forces that shelled them by different medium and heavy weapons whenever they were able to. Southerners consider those offenses as continuation of the war waged on them by the Yemeni Regime since their homeland was occupied in 1994, and they consider the deployment of its military camps on the outskirts of their cities as embodiment of obsession, domination, and threat of using weapons.

The Southern Observatory thinks that the shelling of cities and villages can be only described as a "state terrorism" against civilians who are safe in their cities and villages. The Sanah massacre that took place on 27 December and that was caused by a tank shell, killing and wounding tens of people, continues to be a scene that attracts many.

In Habilain, authority force artilleries shelled citizens' houses on 19 November, which led to a number of casualties, including a child who was severely wounded. On 23 December, one person killed and eight others injured and a lot of houses were damaged, due to the city being shelled by those forces.

[2] The sixth article of the International Covenant concerned with human rights

On 23 December also, the Yemen armed forces shelled with heavy weapons the regions of Dali directorate, including Sanah and Jarbaa, targeting citizens' houses, the city markets and highways as well, resulting in the killing of the citizen Majed Al Zirae'e and wounding eighteen others.

In Hadramout in Masila valley, the Yemeni air force shelled, on 23 December, gatherings of Hamoum tribes in Harour and Gheil bin Yomain regions, for they expressed their refusal of the soldiers' behaviors towards the regions' citizens.

As the Southern Observer denounces the authority forces offenses on the cities, villages and houses of citizens, it demands the immediate cease of those offenses and calls the Yemeni government to withdraw its military camps from the outskirts of the cities, prevent its forces from interfering in citizens' affairs, and justly compensate the victims and the ones affected.

Storming residential quarters and sections:

Militarizing cities of the South is a systematic policy adopted by the Yemen authority forces. They are deployed within checkpoints on the outskirts of the cities and their highways, which provoke citizens and impede their freedom of safe movement under the attitudes of bullying and arrogance practiced on them. Those military checkpoints are illegal originally, let alone that their negative effects are more than their positive ones, since their soldiers often shoot the cars of passers-by under the pretext of "suspicion". Those practices led to the killing and wounding of tens. According to the law, inspection of citizens can be made only in response to the orders issued by the public prosecutor. Therefore, those conditions confirm that the Southern cities are ruled by undeclared emergency law, which makes all the campaigns of storming and inspecting of internal quarters and sections illegal, let alone the panic, terror and anger that affect children and women as result of those campaigns.

The quarters of Mansoura city have transformed, over the year, into a theatre of continuous storming by those forces, where the sounds of bullets being shot heavily from machine guns were always heard. The main high way of the city was a constant target since the Yemeni military units were frequently deployed along it. In addition, the main highway of the Moalla city was also transformed into mobile military barracks, since it witnessed frequently storming operations by occupation forces.

On 24 February, and in the framework of storming operations targeting residential sections, authority forces stormed the main street of Moalla city while shooting heavily, attempting to dispersing peaceful demonstrators.

In the same city, those forces stormed, on 25 February, the "maternity and childhood" hospital, inspecting the rooms of patients, emergency section and delivery room. This event was followed by fire being shot randomly from above the hospital roof towards the civilians' houses.

On 25 January, the Yemeni forces stormed the quarter of "Souk Al Zahab" in Houta city, shooting randomly towards civilians' houses, causing panic and horror to citizens, including women and children. A number of soldiers offended one of the youths in the quarter, who is called Wathab Awad Al Soufi, by beating and insulting him as he objected to the soldiers' behavior.

On 22 December, the authority forces stormed, with armored vehicle and military crews, the cities of Say'oun and Mokalla, shooting live bullets towards peaceful protests, leading to the killing of Fahd Al Amoudy and Ali Al Sawmahi and the injury of more than six others.

A report was published by "Aden Alghad" website on 13 November about the security condition in Aden province. The report indicated that the citizen Mohammad Abed Al Baset, a resident of "Sheikh Ossman" city, informed the author of the report saying: "the people here in Aden are only eager for finding security and safety. What is happening nowadays is terrible and frightening, since we do not feel secured anymore. We got sick of the sounds of bullets; we want to live in peace!"[3]

Southern Observatory demands the Yemeni government to remove the military checkpoints from the entrance and the roads of the cities, as they are illegal. The Observatory also reclaims arresting the perpetrators of soldiers, who killed, injured, beat and insulted citizens, and suing them as well as justly compensating the victims.

Extrajudicial killing as crime against humanity:

Southern Yemen citizens are afraid on their lives from what is perpetrated by the authority forces- deployed in residential quarters and armed with different kinds of weapons. Those forces follow different methods of oppression and maltreatment, since they do not hesitate to shoot any civilian under the pretext of being "suspected". They do not give any importance to the sacred soul of a human being. This made the civilians feel anxious about their lives; especially when they noticed that the crimes of the Yemeni forces against them have been on rise since the beginning of the southern national movement. Everyone who expresses his opposition to the Yemen regime policies becomes a target for its forces bullets.

Noting that, during this year, the Yemeni forces have directly targeted the field leaders of the southern national movement, aiming to liquidate them. On 21 February, the chief of the "Supreme Council of the peaceful movement for the liberation of the South" Hassan Ahmad Baoum was targeted in an assassination attempt. The colonel Nasser Ali Nawba, chief of the "Higher National Body for the Independence of the South", was also survived from an assassination attempt on 21 April, when he was exposed to shooting. On 11 July, the struggler Mohammad Fadel Jabari, the member of the leadership body of the Supreme Council of the peaceful movement, was assassinated. Moreover, on 18 July, there was an attempt to assassinate both the vice-chairman of the Supreme Council of the peaceful movement, Salah Shanfara, and Khaled Masaad, the chief of the movement council in Dali province. Moreover, the struggler Nasser Yazidi, a member of the leadership body of the Supreme Council of the peaceful movement, was exposed to an assassination attempt in Aden Province. During his presence in the location, where the massacre of the mourning camp in Dali was committed, on 27 December, the struggler Shallal Ali Shaye'e, the chief of the Supreme Council of the peaceful revolution, was a subject of an assassination attempt. On 20 December, the young activist Omar Bazanbour, who was the vice-chairman of the Student and Youth Movement in Hadramout, was assassinated.

The assassination crime which targeted Sheikh Saad bin Habrish, the chief of the Hadramout Tribe Alliance, and his companions on 2 December on the entrance of Say'oun city had a profound effect on the Hadramout tribes. Therefore, they were forced to respond to that crime by calling people conduct a popular revolutionary rise, to which national movement forces in all provinces have joined.

On the other side, the authority forces tried to execute liquidation plots on several military and civil leaders and cadres of the southerners working within their apparatus. That is because of their sympathy feelings with their people cause in the South, and due to the authority fears that those southerners may take advantage of their positions to facilitate the affairs of the coming Southern state. Those plots were executed either by bombing cars or by treacherous ambushes or even by direct assassination. During 2013, forty one southern military and security cadres were assassinated, including the brigadiers Fadel Radfani, Ahmad Abd Razzak, Hussein

Mash'aba, and Colonel Mohammad Mohsen Marfadi and others, and comprising three pilots[4].[5]

Concerning the Southern movement activists, they were often exposed to the oppression of the authority forces which view them as human targets of their oppression actions. On the first day of the year 2013, the authority forces targeted two activists in the southern national movement in Atak of Shabwa province. Those were the young men Mohammad Salem Amery and Moahmmad Ahmad Habashi, who were killed because they were calling the citizens of their province to participate in celebrating the anniversary of reconciliation and tolerance. The forces continued targeting the movement activists in the entire South provinces violently and fatally.

Strikingly, those forces do not differentiate in its oppressions between men and women, since women also had their share of these perpetrations. Many women were martyred during this year by shooting from authority forces, including the citizen Afiya Mohammad Fadel who was killed while she was pregnant in her eighth month on 9 February 2013, in her house located in Hay Sa'ada in Khormaksar. In addition, the citizen Hanin Hussein Kadi was killed on 11 February in Buraiqy city. In Hadramout province, Inas Ba Mhaisoun was killed also on 30 October 2013. Note that the total number of the southern murdered women exceeded 70 since the beginning of the southern movement.[6]

Children also weren't excluded from those oppressions. The year 2013 witnessed the killing and wounding of tens of them. On 20 December, the child Omar Mohammad Biti, 14 years, from Mansoura, was killed in addition to Mohammad Ali Nasser Hoza, 15 years, from Mansoura also, who died when he was on his way to be treated from his wounds caused by a bullet from those forces. On 29 December, the authority forces killed in cold blood the child Adel Nizar Turki, 12 years, from Mansoura as well, in addition to tens of children who were killed and wounded.[7]

Shooting of Peaceful events:

Breaking their pledges to refrain from impeding the freedom of expression and peaceful events, the Yemeni authority forces faced those events by all kinds of terror and oppression, including shooting participants. Many appeals were directed to many of international organizations, including international Security Council to call the Yemeni government to stop using excessive force against civilians practicing their right to peaceful gathering[8]. However those forces continued, during 2013, suppressing of many peaceful events held by southerners. Those forces not only used excessive force, but also shot participants with intent to murder. The cruelest act carried by those forces was shooting live bullets on a massive march organized in Aden Province on 21 February, leading to the killing and wounding of tens. One of the perpetrators of this crime was the one known as the "Butcher of Aden", who was an officer in those forces charged with killing participants from near distance. Those forces previously prevented civilians coming from other provinces from participating in that event, closing roads and shooting them from military checkpoint in the regions of Alam and Anad.

On 11 February, a peaceful mass march was held in Aden in commemoration of "the Southern Martyrs" where participants were shot, and two of them died, including a girl called Hanin Hussein Kadi, in addition to 18 casualties with different injuries.

A peaceful march was also organized in Mukalla city on 23 February, demanding the arrest of the soldiers who were responsible for the death of a citizen. The march was heavily attacked by bullets, which resulted in the killing of the young man Awad Ba Salamah. Moreover, tear gas shells were thrown on house roofs, resulting in the suffocation of many women and children.

Although the international and local laws guarantee the right of the victim to be justly recompensed, Southern Observatory did not notice any measures taken by the judicial authorities to guarantee the compensation of the victims of violations. This permits the offender to escape punishment and even encourage him to commit more violations.

Arbitrary arrest is a continuous crime:

Continuing the arbitrary arrest campaigns, the Yemeni authority forces executed in this period many arbitrary arrests against the activists and leaders of the southern national movement, in addition to authors, intellectuals and journalists.

Many southern detainees were thrown in prisons of the Yemeni authority forces since many years, led by the Dean of detainees Ahmad Omar Abady Markashy, as medical sources said to "Aden Alghad" news website, that Markashy is experiencing deteriorating health condition due to a hunger strike that lasted for seven consecutive days[9]. The Arrogance of the Yemeni regime led it to exile the political detainees Hassan Banan and the Bajash Aghbary, members of the Supreme Council for the southern movement, which is a penalty that contradicts the international conventions.

[8] Security Council resolution number 2051 in 2012

On 20 February, Aden province governor issued instructions to arrest twelve activists in the southern movement. That was preceded by arresting leaders in the movement, including Qassem Askar Jubran, secretary general of the Supreme Council of the revolution and sheikh Hassan bin Shoe'ib and chief of the southern sharia body. Similarly, those forces arrested the female academic and leader in the movement Fatima Maisary on 28 August in Khormaksar. In 11 May, a force of the regime militias stormed the house of the southern poet Wadah Salameh, a member of the leadership body of the Supreme Council of the peaceful movement to arrest him, causing casualties in his family members by shooting live bullets.

On 7 July, Aden airport authorities detained the southern activist Abdel Ra'ouf Hassan Zein Sakkaf, the coordinator of the Liberation Quarter in Moalla city after he returned from Cairo. The forces didn't satisfied with that, but they also detained his father the former diplomat and struggler Hassan Amer, since his two sons are activists in the Southern movement.

Regime forces used to conduct arbitrary arrest campaigns on the activists of the southern movement just for raising the southern flags above their houses or painting the flag pictures on walls. On 30 January, the forces stormed Hay Sa'ada in Khormaksar and arrested a number of youths, and opened fire on some others, whereas Wadah Bahilla was wounded.

On 21 August, a military force stormed the house of the elderly Awad Farhan Sae'idi, 76 years, in Hay Sa'ada in Khormaksar without any legal justification. Then it drove him to detention, that's what led to the deterioration of his health, especially as he was suffering many chronic diseases. On 5 January, the activist Abdel Khalik Haidara was exposed to shooting as he escaped from the regime forces that stormed his house attempting to arrest him.

It is worth mentioning that the "hostage" method adopted by the regime forces against civilians, that aims to humiliate and dishonor them, uncover their arrogant approaches that are illegitimate. The citizen Amjad Abdallah Fakih was a victim of those approaches, since he was put in the central prison in Sabr city as a victim for a complete year, just because regime forces was not able to arrest his brother. Moreover, one of the women who went to visit her brother was detained because his brother was able to escape while he was headed to the Court building.

Infringement of freedom of Southern Press:

Freedom of the press and expression is a right guaranteed internationally, nationally and morally, however rights in the Southern Yemen are always vulnerable of being violated. Moreover, people who are active in this domain may also be physically liquidated; especially press and media activists as well as intellectuals in the South. Once an opinion article is published by an intellectual, whether he is a journalist, media figure, or even an ordinary citizen, the oppressive apparatus work hard to mute the voice of the one who expressed it, by enticement or threat or even intimidation, including physical liquidation.

On 3 January, a car distributing "Aden Alghad" newspaper had been chased by unknown gunmen until they stopped it and threatened the people who were inside it, as they were considered as a staff of a "separatist" newspaper. On 23 January, the apparatus in charge of monitoring press banned the electronic broadcasting services for four southern news websites without any justification other than their coverage of the events of the southern national movement. Those were "Aden Alghad", "Yafa news", "Aden FM" and "Mukalla Online".

On 22 February 2013, two persons with military suits stormed the house of the journalist Wajdi Sha'abi, and shot him dead with his friend Wadoud Ali Samiti. On 8 February, the members of the editorial board of "Al Kadiya" newspaper received threats of killing, because they were covering the events of the southern movement and publishing the developments of the southern cause. Moreover, on 5 February, the well-known columnist Najib Yabili received a threat of killing from an unknown person via a text message on his mobile.

In the same context, the journalist Fathi bin Lazrak, the editor in chief of "Aden Alghad" newspaper and website, was threat to be killed, just because he embraces the southern cause and supports the southern national movement. The journalist Salah Sakladi, the manager of "Sada Aden" website was not excluded from threat and intimidation approaches, for his news website stands by the southern cause. Also, the "Aden Live" channel correspondents used to be detained and their cameras confiscated when passing by checkpoints.

Southern Observatory considers the infringements of freedom of press and journalists as crimes affecting the freedom of opinion and expression. That freedom is seen as the basic pillar of the democratic life and is protected by the international community and its human right organizations. The Observatory demands the Yemeni government to put an end to those infringements, arrest the responsible for them, and justly compensate their victims.[10]

Death aircrafts flying over the South:

Many of the residents of the southern cities and villages fear for their lives which became prone to missiles fired by U.S. drones, Yemeni air force, or warships. Those missiles are fired towards presumed inaccurate targets, under the pretext of "fighting terrorism"[11]. As Southern Observatory denounces any terrorist acts and supports fighting them, it emphasizes the need to adhere to international norms for protecting human rights adopted by the United Nations during counter-terrorism operations. Southern Observatory believes that while terrorist acts executed by al-Qaeda form serious danger to the lives of citizens, it considers the attacks of drones as similar threat to the lives of civilians.

During 2013, those operations escalated significantly from what they were in the past years, leading to a number of civilian victims, in addition to the horror they caused for civilians. Those operations generated public and overwhelming anger and discontent especially that they were carried out within the acknowledgement of the official authorities. Southern Observatory points out that using drones in targeting goals is illegal since its outcomes are considered within extrajudicial killing, let alone that this approach is immoral and inhuman because there is no equal balance between the two sides.

Southern Observatory refers the reason of using such operations by the Yemeni government to its abstaining from conducting deterrent ground operations against the supposed "terrorists" despite its ability to do so, and that was demonstrated when confronting those terrorists last year in Jaar and Zonjobar cities in Abyan province. Southern Observatory points out to the disregard noticed when conducting air operations, since neither their conditions nor their accurate results were declared or recognized, let alone that the names and numbers of victims were not published. In addition, the civilians victim resulted from such operations are not recognized, and consequently their families are not entitled to be compensated. “Karama” Organization has issued a report, on 17 October, quoted what the Congressman Dennis Kucinich declared, “the number of the leaders killed after they were targeted by those operations does not represent 2% of the total number of those killed, and the rest are civilians”.[12]

[10] A/HRC/19/ the report of UN High Commissioner for Human Rights no 51
[11] A/HRC/22/26a protecting human rights in the context of countering terrorism.

The victims’ families were confused, this is why the engineer Faisal Ahmad Jaber, directly visited the United States, demanding the clarification of the reasons that made its warplanes cause the death of two of his relatives, his nephew Walid Abdallah Jaber, 21 years, and sheikh Salem bin Ahmad Jaber. He expressed the tragedy conditions of their families and children in particular in addition to the fear and horror from which the residents of his village “Khashamer”, in Hadramout, suffer because of those raids. The “Guardian” reported that while he was in Washington, Mr. Faisal sent a letter to the US and Yemeni presidents at the eve of their meeting in the White House, on the first of August, uncovering that his family was afraid to be targeted by Qaeda components because of its position, however the Americans who are fighting Qaeda were the ones who caused the death of its two members”.[13]

Although many international humanitarian organizations as well as the UN Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial executions condemned those actions, and in spite of the voting session held by the Yemeni parliament on limiting attacks by unmanned aircrafts, these attacks are still continuing on the territory of the South of Yemen. Those planes have stepped up strikes targeting cars of possible elements of "Al Qaeda" in each of the provinces of Abyan and Shabwa, Lahj and Hadramout, in addition to continuing to fly over some of the cities and in particular the city of Lauder in Abyan.

Southern Observatory stresses the importance of stopping attacks, by drones or other similar warplanes and battleships, against presumed targets without any legal justifications. It also confirms the observance of international standards for the protection of human rights during field operations directed against terrorism, and calls for fair compensation for the civilian victims resulting from those attacks.

Yemeni Dialogue Conference is a conspiracy against the Southern people:

The Yemeni political system has been working on derailing the cause of the southern people and violating its right to self-determination. In this context, the Yemeni government included the southern cause in the so-called "comprehensive national dialogue conference" agenda, aiming to knock over the people's aspirations concerning freedom and independence. The political regime is seeking to transform the southern people's libertarian cause from a political cause into just a demanding one with a limited human right nature. In response, the southern people organized, on 18 March, a demonstration of millions under the title "we are the decision makers". The participants declared their refusal of the inclusion of the southern cause in the Dialogue Conference, confirming that the outputs of that conference do not concern them in any case. They also demanded to hold compeer negotiations between the two parties, under international supervision, in order to reach an agreement concerning the separation.

Emphasizing the southerners' rights and demands regarding freedom and independence, the year 2013 witnessed programmatic events, where thousands of citizens took to the streets in massive marches, demanding their right of restoring their independent state. Citizens in main cities of the southern provinces used to organize such marches every Thursday and Monday of each week. Moreover, a civil disobedience is carried out every Wednesday in addition to sit-in protests. The most significant events among those are the "million" marches in which citizens celebrate the southern national occasions. Tens of "millions" protests were organized, where the protestors' determination and insistence concerning the regaining of freedom and independence impressed the observers, despite the oppression carried by the authorities on those events, whenever it is possible. Southern Observatory believes that those efforts exerted by the Yemeni political system are gross violations against the southern people's right to express its aspirations, choose its trends, and restore its independent state. Thus, Southern Observatory calls the Yemeni authorities that admit the failure of the unity project, to comply with the language of mind and reason, and consent the right of the southern people to self-determination, to restore its independent state, and to establish good neighborly relations between the two peoples.

Yemeni regime forces violations are within the sight of the International Community:

Southern Observatory considers those crimes as a continuity of the Yemeni regime policies towards the South. Those policies aim at subjugating the South by force and keeping it under the hegemony of the Yemeni authorities, which indicates that the southern people will always suffer from the oppression against it and will continue to be exposed to different methods of maltreatment and deprivation of its freedoms and aspirations, add to that the massacres those forces may perpetrate without any accountancy or watching. Under these conditions, Southern Observatory is supposed to take over the task of delivering those violations and crimes to the international community and prompting it to hold its humanitarian and legal responsibilities, calling it to adopt a mechanism that would protect the southern people from the tyranny of the military apparatus belonging to the Yemeni regime. Thus, Southern Observatory is urgently informing the humanitarian international organizations with the crimes and violations. In their turn, those organizations expressed their condemnation and denunciation of those violations, calling the Yemeni government to respect its international commitments and pledges towards human rights and to stop violence against the southern civilians.[14] [15] [16]

It is planned for the UN staff of the human right council, which is specialized in examining periodic state reports, to revise the Yemeni government report on 29 January 2014, as the human right record of the Yemeni government as well as its commitments to international conventions will be evaluated. The UN staff will be concerned in examining what is perpetrated against the southern civilians. It is worth mentioning that there are many notifications that have been sent to Yemeni government for clarification and still without any response till now.

In this concern, Southern Observatory indicates that two years passed and the Yemeni government still disregard the execution of the human right council resolution number 18/19 issued on 29 December 2011. The resolution requires the setting up of a transparent and independent investigation committee to look into the human right violations perpetrated against civilians. This indicates that the Yemeni government is indifferent regarding the international resolutions as well as the arrest of the perpetrators, enabling them to escape punishment and committing more crimes. “4”

In this context, we point out that the Yemeni government is cheating on the international laws by abstaining from joining to the bodies that protect those laws, since it didn’t approve until now the first Protocol annexed to the International Covenant for the civil and political rights which gives the victims the right to file international grievances against the ones who violate their rights. By doing this, the Yemeni government is depriving the victims from filing their complaints to the concerned international bodies and therefore confiscating their rights, without trying to take over the task of punishing the perpetrators, not to say that it is the one that stands behind those violations.

Based on all above mentioned, Southern Observatory for human rights calls the civil society organizations and all the forces advocating human rights, to pressure the Yemeni government to approve the first Protocol annexed to the International Covenant for the civil and political rights which gives the victims the right to file international grievances against the violators of their rights.
